Keep Smiling Son...

When losing someone close, everything reminds you of them, their time on this earth, although short lived.

I see you in the small things even though this is big, I never ever thought that I would be burying my kid.

Your smile lit up rooms. Your personality did too. You were loved by so many yet taken too soon.

Fashion, shoes, hats and tattoos, all the things that reminds me of you... some of those things I like too, you used to tell me "Ma, I get my style from you."

Cameras and videos, some of the best photos... you would take... just to make... other people smile, you would go that extra mile... because it was something that you loved... guess heaven needed you more... to capture its beauty. In pain, no more.

You definitely have a story, graduated an entire year early... because you were so smart, that set you apart to do nothing but great things, which means you could have been anything... that you wanted to be.

Unique and sweet, you walked to your own beat... you lived like some of us wished we could... on purpose and unashamed, yet often misunderstood.

This hurts so much right now, but I will keep smiling, I know you're in a much better place than we are, I definitely won't doubt Him. From this day forward, I know the sun will be shining much brighter, because your smile had that kind of effect on everything you encountered.

Nothing could prepare me for such a time as this, but knowing that I'll see you later, in the meantime you will be missed.

I love you son,

Ma

His Journey's Just Begun

*Don't think of him as gone away
his journey's just begun,
life holds so many facets this earth is only one.*

Just think of him as resting from the sorrows and the tears in a place of warmth and comfort where there are no days or years.

*Think how he must be wishing that we could know the day
how nothing but our sadness can really pass away.*

And know that he is living, rejoicing, and free.

God's son is home,

I cannot wait till again we meet!
